Press night: Saturday 8th August 2015, 6.25pm

Bromance – Noun (informal) 1. a close but non-sexual relationship between two men. Early 21st cent.: blend of brother and romance.

Frenetic but friendly. Captivating but casual. Audacious but awkward. Multi award-winning UK circus company Barely Methodical Troupe fuse their inner frats with a dazzling tour-de-force of cutting edge circus prowess and physical theatre mayhem.

The jaw-dropping magnificent (The Stage) hot ticket of the Edinburgh Fringe 2014 (winner, Total Theatre and Jackson's Lane Award for Best Circus) returns to Edinburgh fresh from London's Udderbelly Festival.

Join this critically-acclaimed company as they walk the line between the pugnacious and the poignant, in this hilarious, bitter-sweet and mind-blowing celebration of everything blokey – where handshakes become handstands and back slaps become backflips. The show introduces ideas about intense trust, support and personal space with relationships being at the heart of Bromance as it wittily explores male companionship and its limits.

Barely Methodical Troupe are Beren d'Amico, Louis Gift, and Charlie Wheeler who are destined to take British contemporary circus to new heights.

Bromance is produced by DREAM with support from Underbelly Productions and the National Centre for Circus Arts through the Circus Maximus Award. Supported using public funding by the National Lottery through Arts Council England

Barely Methodical Troupe

BMT (Barely Methodical Troupe) is an experimental acrobatic circus company, fusing Hand-to-Hand and Cyr Wheel with a through line of creative dynamic movement.

The artists came to circus, each having trained independently in their own respective fields, with a thirst for breaking boundaries. Influenced by their already existing skill sets (Parkour, Bboying, and Tricking), they have a fresh perspective on the creation of their material. This combination of technical ability with their stylish flow is the defining feature of the troupe. For more info, <http://www.barelymethodical.com/>.
